

Music

Northern's degrees in Music Education (BME), Music (BA or BS), and Music with Elective Studies in an Outside Area (MUSE) are accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music. A 16-credit music minor is offered as well. Non majors are also encouraged to participate in ensembles, private lessons, and other music courses. The BME degree prepares students for careers in public or private school education. The BA and BS degrees provide a solid musical training for students interested in careers as professional performers or in other music-related careers (Some are listed under Potential Careers, below). The music field is competitive and requires both talent and perseverance. Preparation is the foundation for success. NMU music graduates receive excellent academic preparation and form relationships with dedicated faculty members who provide long-term encouragement and support.

Skills and Competencies

Music Education : An effective music teacher must possess many skills, including the abilities to read musical notation quickly and understand the elements of music in a wide range of styles. He or she must be able to rehearse and conduct vocal and instrumental groups for students of various ages and abilities. Music teaching requires strong interpersonal and communication skills. Music Careers in General: Music students take courses in theory, aural training, and music history. They rehearse and perform with instrumental and/or vocal ensembles. They take private lessons on an instrument (or voice) and present a final senior recital or performing project. Depending on the music-related profession, other skills are developed through a combination of classes and practical 'on the job' experience. These may include auditioning techniques, theatrical training, audio engineering, arts management, or music retail experience, to name just a few.

Course Work

Complete details on music degrees can be found at www.nmu.edu/music. Here is a brief overview:

Core courses (all majors)

Four semesters of music theory and aural skills, introductory music appreciation followed by three semesters of music history. Core also includes form and analysis, basic composition, and arranging. Students present a senior recital or project.

General Education (all majors)

To broaden their educational experience outside their major, NMU students take a variety of courses from the General Education curriculum. Courses are selected to fulfill specific learning outcomes, including critical thinking, social responsibility, integrative thinking, and human expression.

Performance Lessons, Ensembles, and Piano (all majors)

Music majors take private lessons on their primary instrument (or voice) and participate in various performing groups. They must also attain the level of piano skill required by their particular degree.

Music Education (BME) Students

BME majors study conducting and other courses related to dealing with performing groups and teaching music in schools. They learn to play standard band and orchestra instruments in order to teach them at a school level. Students complete professional education courses offered by the School of Education and successfully complete a semester of student teaching. Michigan certification is Pre-K-12, instrumental and vocal.

BA/BS and MUSE Students

BA or BS majors complete a program of electives in music and must complete a minor. The BA degree has a foreign language requirement. MUSE majors complete a specific program of electives in an area outside of music. Areas of concentration include: Music Management, Entrepreneurship, Marketing and Publicity, and Multimedia Production.

Career Development

It is never too early to begin developing your resume. Look for chances to perform, listen to music, participate in workshops, attend concerts, and teach. Develop relationships with music teachers and other professional musicians; ask questions and form a network of contacts. To prepare for majoring in music in college, you should take as much music theory as you can, develop your music-reading skills, learn to play the piano, and of course study your major instrument, with a private teacher if possible. Overall, dedicate yourself to being a strong and consistent student; keep your grade point average high. The Academic and Career Advisement Center can assist you with career planning.

Additional Considerations

Employers in many fields take notice of applicants with music degrees; music study requires a high level of discipline, musicians are creative and positive, and musical aptitude is known to be correlated with other desirable skills.

For non-teaching music majors, the choice of additional coursework is important since many careers combine music with other skills. For example, a marketing and publicity concentration might be a good choice for a music major hoping to work in concert promotion.

Job Outlook

Though public school music education programs are affected by local and state budget difficulties, there is a reliable and steady supply of teaching jobs for graduates who are well qualified and willing to relocate. Northern's music education graduates have been extremely successful in locating teaching positions. The median salary public high school music teachers in is approx $62,870 in 2020. In non-teaching music careers, performance musicians earned a median hourly wage of $31.40 (Bureau of Labor Statistics).
