

Theatre & Entertainment Arts

NMU's BA degree in Theatre and Entertainment Arts combines both classroom and experiential education to create a well-rounded theatre generalist. Students enjoy an equal mix of performance and technical theatre courses, along with the flexibility to customize their degree with theatre electives to suit their specific interests.

Theatre students are given numerous performance and technical opportunities throughout their time at Northern with 6+ mainstage productions each year in two different theatres, the Forest Roberts Theatre and the James A. Panowski Black Box Theatre. Additionally, Marquette, MI boasts a thriving arts community that provides students even more opportunities to do what they love.

If you want to learn from faculty who have worked professionally in the industry both nationally and internationally, have the opportunity to study abroad and experience theatre in other cities and even countries, and meet some incredible people along the way, a theatre degree from NMU may be for you!

Skills and Competencies

Aspiring performers and technicians—and anyone interested in careers within the dramatic field—should take part in high school and university theatre, or work with community and nonprofit theatres for experience. Formal theatre training or acting experience is generally necessary, although some people enter the field without it. Most training takes place at colleges and universities throughout the country offering bachelor's and master's degrees in theatre. College theatre curricula usually include courses in acting, directing, stagecraft, design, theatre history and the liberal arts. Northern Michigan University is no exception. In fact, the preparation you'll receive as a theatre major at NMU will provide you with a solid academic background that will help you whether or not you decide to enter the theatre field. Your ability to write and speak effectively is absolutely critical in today's workforce. Similarly, your ability to analyze and solve problems is also important. Much of your academic course work—be it in theatre, literature, or philosophy—will help you fine-tune these skills.

Career Development

You should begin the resume-building process as soon as you can. The Academic and Career Advisement Center can assist you with career planning, while Career Services will help you fine tune your resume and look for jobs related to your field. In the meantime, the more hands-on experience you have, the better the chances are that you will find a job. Becoming involved in a professional related internship and the Alpha Psi Omega National Theatre Honor Society, the more ways you have to develop your professional skills and gain experience. In addition to participating in the various productions and activities offered by the Forest Roberts Theatre, NMU, and beyond, members have the opportunity to be part of a family unlike any other. Of course, your academic course work is important as well, so be sure to maintain a high grade point average.

Additional Considerations

Practical experience on stage or backstage is imperative in these fields.

Graduate work focusing on cinema exclusively is a necessary prerequisite to some film careers.

A business minor or second major would be helpful if you're interested in the business field. Proficiency in a second language may be helpful.

Remember to take any necessary exams early; it can take up to six weeks for results to be sent to schools to which you applied.

Job Outlook

Careers in theatre and entertainment arts are expected to grow as fast as average. Due to the very diverse collection of professions, salary can range from very low to as much as top earning Hollywood stars.
