

Takedown Policy

Heritage organizations that submit their collections to UPLINK are responsible for ensuring that their collections are in the public domain or making a diligent, good faith effort to find and obtain the permission of the copyright holder. UPLINK endeavors to double-check copyright status and to look for sensitive and private information in collections.

However, despite our best efforts, it is always possible that something has slipped through the cracks. If you are the copyright holder of an item in our collection and do not want it online, please contact us. After confirming that you are the copyright holder, we will take the item down. If you see any private information about yourself that you do not want online, please contact us and we will take it down. Please submit takedown requests or copyright concerns via the “Contact Us” page or by emailing uplink@nmu.edu.
